Not too long ago, parents told their children that babies were brought by storks. After providing that piece of misinformation, most adults refused to discuss sex any further with their bewildered offspring. The result was the development of young people who could not face up to the fact that their mothers and fathers had experienced sex together. Such activity was too "degrading" to the image of purity parents assumed.

Even more destructive than the establishment of such an unreal picture of life was the effect sexual ignorance had on the personalities of the growing teenagers. Many women in their forties and fifties today are frigid because they cannot overcome their conditioned opinion that sex is sinful and demeaning. And many men are plagued with sexual incapacities that stem from warped attitudes toward their own bodies.

Today, fortunately, the situation is changing. Many young people are more aware than their parents of the

When twilight falls, the night gals come out of their sheltered boudoirs in search of midnight adventure. They love the excitement of bright lights, preferring them to the sun. In most ways, these gals are alike. But each has her own reason for choosing the life of a night person. Here are just a few:

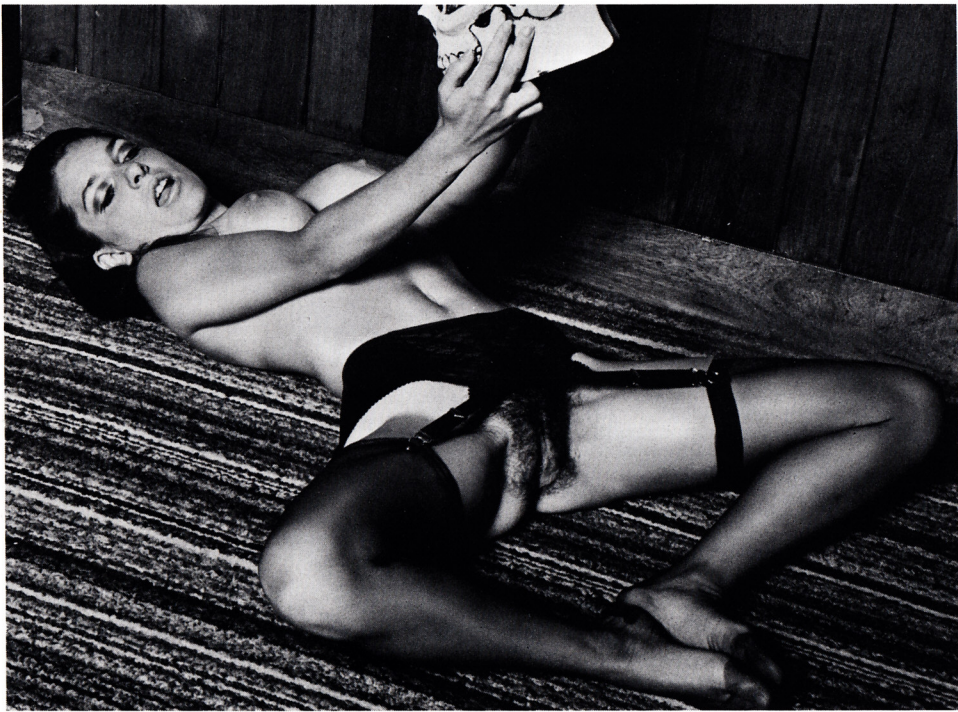

Angela loves to gamble. She puts her money down on the spin of a wheel or a roll of the dice. Men who live the sporting life turn her on. She's found that a man who knows how to bet is usually great when he takes a chick to bed, so she keeps her eyes open for the big winners. You'll meet Angela wherever there's lots of action.

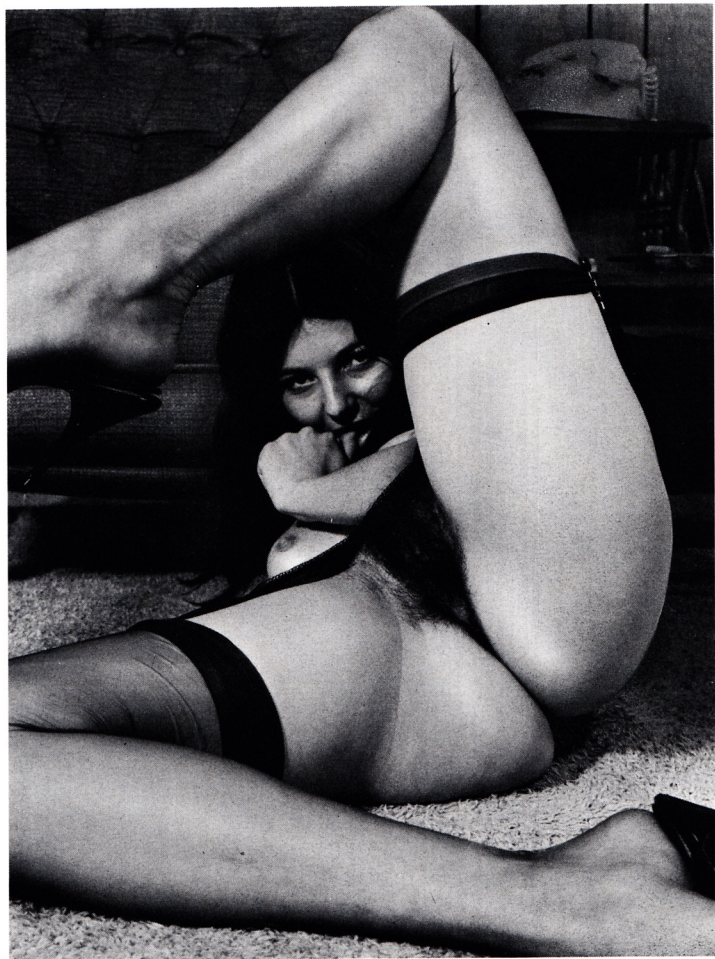

When Rhoda steps out, you know the sun has set and the night lights are shining. But she doesn't go for stars and moonshine. Her choice is anything that is man-made. Vegas and Reno are her favorite haunts, not because she likes the tables, but because she digs the exciting floor shows and the men who perform. She's a pushover for gents who like to be "on stage."

Dining out is Valerie's dish. She loves to eat a good piece of meat, so she seeks out men who can provide what she likes. "The bigger the better," she explains. "When I get a good steak, I just want to stuff myself." Lucky for her, she seems to thrive on a high-protein diet. She uses so much energy eating, she stays slim.

YOU'LL BE MY SLAVE

The chorus lines at the best nightclubs would be duds if it weren't for gals like Gayle. She's been dancing since she was a kid, and she can't tolerate inactivity. She knows all the best ways to wiggle her body, and she loves when men show their appreciation of her titillating movements. She's sure to bounce her way to fame.

There are lots more night gals, each with her own reason for shunning the sun. All a man has to do is look for one who likes the same erotic games that turn him on. Then, because most night gals know that the best entertainment is sex, he can be sure he'll have the hours of darkness lit up with delightful, seductive companionship.

realities of human sexuality. In many states, sex education classes have finally ripped away the veil of secrecy that false modesty has used to obliterate all information about man's sexual behavior.

Because they are finally acquiring this knowledge, today's young people often find themselves in opposition to the censorial laws that have, for many generations, squelched the dissemination of erotic material and data. And, ridiculous as it may seem, we now find that some fearful adults are busily attempting to use censorship to "protect" the young from information that is common knowledge among people under thirty. These elderly, misguided busybodies are anxiously working to stem the tide of sexual understanding that is spreading from the ranks of the young into the older generations. And they are doing it under the guise of "sheltering" the youth of America from contact with "obscenity."

It's time for men of intelligence, aware of the realities of life, to stand up for human dignity. You as a reader of this magazine, know that knowledge is power. You know that it is misinformation that can really hurt. Truth can only make us free.

Take a stand. Write to your elected representatives and demand that they remove all censorial laws governing the dissemination of sexually oriented material. Only when adults have available information that can point the way to sexual understanding will the older citizens be able to meet young people on a basis of mutual understanding. As long as adults deny the essential sexuality of our natures, older people (who make the laws) will never be able to communicate with younger people (who must abide by them).
